

COVID-19 in children

Irja Lutsar, Estonia

Children are not the main victims of COVID-19 – they will be equally infected to adults but the course of disease is usually mild and rarely requires hospitalization or leads to serious consequences. Still there are rare immune mediated syndromes mainly occurring in children such as MIS-C and likely new hepatitis of unknown etiology. Furthermore children's life has been severely disturbed during COVID-19 pandemic – schools and after school activities were severely affected increasing psychological burden to children. Immunisation of small children against COVID-19 is still uncontroversial issue and will be discussed in the presentation. It is quite clear that next wave SARS-CoV-2 continue to emerge. How to live with the SARS-CoV-2 so that our life is minimally disturbed will be discussed as well.
